Course Overview

Computers and the worldwide web have transformed historical research, analysis, and presentation. Scholars from around the world communicate electronically. Rare manuscripts, once inaccessible, are available to anyone with an internet connection. Google's vast library of digitized books is searchable by word, phrase, topic, and within specified time periods. Humanities scholars engage in large-scale collaborative projects, encode documents, and tell stories using interactive, data-rich maps. This course contemplates the promise and peril of these trends while students conduct research and generate content for several online projects.

Course Objectives

1. Introduce students to the history of digital technology and its impact on historical practice.
2. Familiarize students with the challenges and possibilities of the new media for humanities scholarship.
3. Introduce students to web technologies and applications used in the digital humanities.
4. Create and contribute to digital history projects.

Digital Projects

Activity 1: Examine crowd-sourced history projects Clio (<https://www.theclio.com/>) and The American Soldier (<https://www.zooniverse.org/projects/tkotwim/the-american-soldier>). Every student will become a contributor to the world's largest and jointly written online encyclopedia.

Activity 2: Learn about Geographic Information Systems (GIS) and present historical research making use of either <http://storymaps.arcgis.com/en/> or <https://timeline.knightlab.com/>.

Activity 3: Consider the implications of virtual reality (VR) --<https://vr.google.com/earth/>-- and augmented reality (AR) for history education. Use 360 cameras, in collaboration with Dr. Brendan Beal, for a project related to historic landmarks in the Montevallo area.

Activity 4: Scan and create metadata for materials from the university's Annie Crawford Milner Archives. Create a digital exhibit from these materials for the class Omeka website: <http://carmichaeldigitalprojects.org/archivingmontevallo/>.

Attendance and Participation

Good participation means making comments, asking questions, and working well in your assigned groups. You will come to class having carefully reviewed the assigned articles or websites. Be prepared for my questions or the questions of your classmates. Your participation grade is a composite of your attendance and the quality of your participation on those days. You will receive a “zero” for participation if you miss more than three class sessions.

Fishbowl Discussion

We will “Fishbowl” some of the reading material. On these days, you will prepare two written questions about each of the assigned readings. Three students, chosen at random, will form a “panel” responsible for answering the classroom’s questions.

Withdrawal Deadline

The last day for students to withdraw from a course and receive a grade of “W” is Tuesday, October 24.

Graduate Level

Students taking History 511 course should speak with me about an additional assignment or activity that will be assessed along with all other requirements that appear in the syllabus.

University of Montevallo Forum

ForUM e-mail is an official means of communication among students, faculty, and administrators at the University of Montevallo – and may be THE official means of communication between you and your instructors. You may receive a variety of very important ForUM e-mail messages from various offices on campus for which some timely response will be required. The official email system for students is identified by userid@forum.montevallo.edu and can be accessed via the For UM link on the university home page, www.montevallo.edu.

Disability Policy

The University of Montevallo provides equal opportunity to qualified students. If you have a disability (medical, physical, learning, psychological, etc.) and wish to request disability-related accommodations to complete course requirements, contact Disability Support Services (located in Main Hall, rear entrance; 665-6250). Course requirements cannot be waived, but reasonable accommodations may be provided based on disability documentation and course objectives. Accommodations cannot be made retroactively.

Plagiarism and Academic Dishonesty

To claim as one’s own the ideas or words of another is plagiarism. Consult with me if you are unsure about how to cite sources. An assignment on which plagiarism or cheating has occurred will receive no credit, i.e. a “zero,” and an Academic Dishonesty Incident Form concerning the incident will be kept on file in the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs.
